Will Dalian vanadium remove the world's biggest battery?

When it comes online in 2020, the Dalian vanadium station will remove roughly eight-percent of the current load of the power grid. However, its status as the world's biggest battery may be short-lived, as several large Vanadium Redox Flow Battery (VRFB) installations are being built in China.

What is happening with vanadium batteries in China?

Important developments related to the commercialization of vanadium batteries occurred in China in September. Construction commenced on China's first gigawatt-hour (GWh) vanadium flow power station in Qapqal Xibe, Xinjiang, with a total installed capacity of a million kilowatts (kW).

Are vanadium batteries more cost efficient?

Vanadium batteries are nevertheless more cost efficient in the long run, considering their longer life cycle compared with other storage batteries. "A lithium battery can normally work for around 10 years, but a vanadium battery can run for 20-30 years," the battery raw-material analyst said.

Will vanadium replace lithium as China's electric vehicle battery of choice?

Vanadium batteries are currently in their initial breakout stage of commercialization in China, primarily for power generation and storage for the electric grid. However, as the technology develops, vanadium may eventually replace lithium as China's electric vehicle battery of choice.

How long do vanadium batteries last?

A vanadium battery energy storage power station has a lifetime of about 20 years and can be charged and discharged up to 15,000 times. With a water-based electrolyte system, moreover, the vanadium battery is immune to catching fire and exploding.
